St. Bartholomew's Hospital Journal,

OCTOBER 14th, 1899.

"Æquam memento rebus in arduis Servare mentem."—Horace, Book ii, Ode iii

WITH this October number we commence the seventh year of issue of our JOURNAL. At least 115 new readers are added to our rôle; to them especially we devote a few words of welcome and offer a cordial handshake. For the next five years, or more, their interests, both as to work and recreation, will be centred in St. Bartholomew's Hospital. To-day they realise but partially, if at all, how closely that institution will ultimately become associated with their life and thought, so much so that for many of them, if our own experiences go for anything, the happiest and most fruitful period of their manhood will be indicated by that same magic word.

Last month we were able to set forth fully what are the primary objects of the JOURNAL. This month we wish to emphasise the fact that its columns are as much at the service of the first year's man as of the veteran amongst us.

It is but natural that we should cherish a desire to cater for the interests of the qualified man, far removed from us it may be by the exigencies of general practice or other work, hoping that by our means a link with the old place may be preserved when many another bond becomes of necessity severed. For once a Bart.'s man always a Bart.'s man is a feeling that appeals to all who have left the happy time of actual studentship behind them. But especially are our columns open every month for the discussion of any topic that concerns the hospital life of the students, and for recording any events which are features in its progress. Cigarette ends and fragments of last week's Pick-me-up found in the box allotted to the JOURNAL in the smoking-room are difficult matters to make copy of; but short of such editorial impossibilities as these, we are always glad to receive and publish whatever seems of interest to any section of the school.

So much for the place of our JOURNAL in the scheme of things. Turning now to the manner of the work into which our new colleagues have entered, the present position of Medicine, and the hopes of its future progress, we instinctively refer them to Dr. Church's Abernethian address in this issue, so appropriate in this respect. "You are commencing the study of Medicine at an auspicious time," Dr. Church concludes by saying; "the road you will have to travel is not without its difficulties and temptations, and I heartily wish you God-speed on your journey through life." And if, after reading Dr. Church's fascinating retrospect of the past sixty years' advancement in the science and art they have made their life-work, a feeling somewhat akin to despair arise with respect to their own share in the further progress of the future, let them remember that to earnest knocking the gate of knowledge will often open; but that to mere waiting, however patient, it always remains fast closed.

"I have great confidence," Oliver Wendell Holmes once said, "in young men who believe in themselves. When a resolute young fellow steps up to the great bully, the World, and takes him boldly by the beard, he is often surprised to
