Editorial

THERE ARE A great many views, held individually, on what the Journal is, and what it should be; and yet few of our critics, when questioned, seem fully to understand the purpose of this publication.

It has been suggested that these pages could carry a little more humour, but the Journal is no medical equivalent of Punch, and it is certainly not part of our policy to swamp it with the various forms of humour which may be gathered from the resources at our disposal. Humorous articles and poems, however, do appear in sensibly balanced proportion, and either pertain to a matter of domestic interest, or are submitted for publication by some very welcome contributor.

A second suggestion is "that we include more articles of educational value", yet just as we do not wish to upset the balance by overloading the Journal with humour, so neither do we wish to tip it the other way. The articles published are of general medical interest, and although they will further our knowledge, they are not primarily intended to assist the examination candidate.

The final suggestion is that the Journal broadens its scope, but here it is necessary to
