Programme outline

The MA in Film draws on the established strengths of the Department of Film and offers a wide range of modules taught by specialists in the field. The MA programme offers a flexible approach and students are able to choose one of three pathways according to their interests: Theory pathway, Documentary Practice pathway or Directing Fiction pathway.

The Theory pathway offers students the opportunity to explore key aspects of film analysis, theory, history and practice. Through a range of different approaches to the study of film, including genre and textual analysis, audience studies, and media archaeology, students will be exposed to some of the most pressing debates about film today. Questions of ethics and whether we can consider film as a document; of how film works on our bodies as an affective medium; the reasons for film's close affinity to urban, cosmopolitan and diasporic cultures; and the historical legacy of film as an international, and now transnational medium, are all central to the programme. In exploring these questions, students will be introduced to some of the liveliest and most important chapters in the history of cinema.

The Documentary Practice pathway investigates, articulates, questions and challenges issues of individual, social, political and ideological importance. It utilizes documentary production as a professional creative skill and as a practice-based research tool to create work of sophisticated, intellectual and critical enquiry. The programme involves critical enquiry and research into documentary production and also result in creative production work to a professional standard.

The Directing Fiction pathway trains students in the technical, theoretical, creative and aesthetic skills necessary to direct fiction film, and helps students find their own voice and vision as a director. The programme consists of an innovative combination of technical training, suitable for those completely new to filmmaking and those wanting to further their craft, mentoring in the production of a number of short films written and directed by the students, and historical and theoretical teaching.

Both Documentary Practice and Direction Fiction pathways have students graduate with a roster of festival ready films, and the skills to pursue independent filmmaking or work in the industry, and all three pathways equip students with skills and knowledge to pursue a range of careers in film and broadcasting, as well as continuing on to PhD study.

Aims of the programme

This programme will:

- Allow students to explore key aspects of film analysis, theory, history and practice.
- Give students the opportunity to develop practical film making skills, as well as study theoretical modules.
- Offer students the chance to debate cutting edge issues in Film Studies. QMUL has particular strengths in new areas of research in Film Philosophy, in Ecocinema and Screening Nature, New Independent Indian Cinema, and in film outside the cinema – in art galleries, on public screens, across social media.
- Enable students to develop knowledge, intellectual, critical understanding and insight into current documentary practices, which are informed by the forefront of professional practice and also through established and cutting edge academic research.
- Enable students to study the forms, aesthetics and production methods of documentary practice as they have developed historically and in a contemporary context. To frame this study with a theoretical engagement with questions of representation, culture and ideology, while maintaining a strong theoretical and practical sense of the political and ethical.
- Enable students to obtain a comprehensive understanding of research techniques applicable to their own work in terms of both written, research-based and practice-based outputs.
- Enable students to demonstrate self-direction and originality in tackling and solving problems, and to act autonomously in planning and implementing tasks at a professional or equivalent level
- Enable students to deal with complex issues both systematically and creatively and communicate clearly through their research to specialist and non-specialist audiences.
- Enable students to employ initiative, personal responsibility and decision-making in complex and unpredictable situations.
- Enable students to reach a standard where they are suitable to undertake high level and/or undertake work in academic research and (if selected, in film practice) to a standard of excellence.

What will you be expected to achieve?

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge, understanding and skills in terms of academic and discipline content and transferable skills. The programme outcomes are referenced to the relevant QAA benchmark descriptor(s) (see above) and the Framework for Higher Education Qualifications in England, Wales and Northern Ireland (2008), and relate to the typical student. Additionally, the SEEC Credit Level Descriptors for Further and Higher Education 2003 and Queen Mary Statement of Graduate Attributes have been used as a guiding framework for curriculum design.

Academic Content:

A 1	Reflect on multiple academic modes of viewing and analysing abstract concepts relating to the study of the moving image.
A 2	Cultivate a wide-ranging awareness of scholarly literature on multifarious dimensions of Film Studies
A 3	Develop the ability to relate and apply epistemological and pedagogical concepts to practical and performative cinematic examples

A 4	A critical and engaged understanding of film practice and film theory informed by a range of current research issues
A 5	A sophisticated knowledge of documentary practice supported by a highly developed understanding of practice-based documentary production techniques and skills
A 6	A comprehensive understanding of research techniques in relation to outputs for both specialist and non-specialist audiences.
A 7	A sophisticated understanding of group and team work, production planning, research and problem-solving skills, enabling the production of work to a standard of both professional and academic excellence.

Disciplinary Skills - able to:
B 1	Further the ability to conduct probing analytical interpretations of film texts and develop critical perspectives on cinema using a range of research methods, theoretical, philosophical and disciplinary paradigms.
B 2	Gain a broad understanding of diverse forms of cinema commensurate with a global worldview
B 3	Express critical readings of cinema through sophisticated written work and film practice
B 4	Engage confidently in academic and professional communication with others within the field of practice and film theory.
B 5	Apply knowledge and to interpret knowledge within the discipline
B 6	Critically evaluate current research and advanced scholarship in the shared disciplines of practice and film theory
B 7	Evaluate new methodologies, develop critiques of them and where appropriate propose new hypothesis and practices.
B 8	Continue and advance knowledge and understanding and to develop new skills to a high level.

Attributes:
C 1	An ability to research and formulate critical analyses of films, calling upon topical discourses and pertinent analogies
C 2	An ability to identify confluences in film theory, analysis and practice
C 3	Skills, abilities and knowledge that have applicability in both academic and non-academic spheres
C 4	Demonstrate the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility, decision-making and problem-solving in complex and unpredictable situations and the independent learning ability required for continuing professional development.
C 5	Clarify a group task and lead, work with or work within a group towards a defined outcome. Be able to negotiate and handle conflict with confidence.
C 6	Produce work to a professional standard in both written and audio-visual communication
C 7	The ability to plan and produce work, both written and practice-based to a high level academic standard and to a high professional standard.
C 8	The ability to undertake independent high quality research and produce work which can communicate to specialist and non-specialist audiences.

C9	The ability to plan, schedule and complete complex tasks, when working individually or as part of a group.

What are the entry requirements?

The entry requirements are as stated in the Queen Mary prospectus for current entry, and on the Queen Mary website <http://www.qmul.ac.uk/undergraduate/coursefinder/index.html>

How will the quality of the programme be managed and enhanced? How do we listen to and act on your feedback?

The Staff-Student Liaison Committee provides a formal means of communication and discussion between schools/institutes and its students. The committee consists of student representatives from each year in the school/institute together with appropriate representation from staff within the school/institute. It is designed to respond to the needs of students, as well as act as a forum for discussing programme and module developments. Staff-Student Liaison Committees meet regularly throughout the year.

Each school/institute operates an Education Committee, or equivalent, which advises the School/Institute Director of Education on all matters relating to the delivery of taught programmes at school level including monitoring the application of relevant QMUL policies and reviewing all proposals for module and programme approval and amendment before submission to Taught Programmes Board. Student views are incorporated in the committee's work in a number of ways, such as through student membership, or consideration of student surveys.

All schools/institutes operate an Annual Programme Review of their taught undergraduate and postgraduate provision. APR is a continuous process of reflection and action planning which is owned by those responsible for programme delivery; the main document of reference for this process is the Taught Programmes Action Plan (TPAP) which is the summary of the school/institute's work throughout the year to monitor academic standards and to improve the student experience. Students' views are considered in this process through analysis of the NSS and module evaluations.

What academic support is available?

In addition to the huge range of support for students provided by QMUL (the Dean and Deputy Dean for Students; the Student Finance and Bursary Officer; Queen Mary Advice and Counselling Service; Occupational Health Service; Student Health Service; Careers Service; Library Services; Disability and Dyslexia Service; Students' Union; Westfield Nursery; Chaplaincy, etc.), all MA students are supported by their individual advisors.

Programme-specific rules and facts

How inclusive is the programme for all students, including those with disabilities?

Queen Mary has a central Disability and Dyslexia Service (DDS) that offers support for all students with disabilities, specific learning difficulties and mental health issues. The DDS supports all Queen Mary students: full-time, part-time, undergraduate, postgraduate, UK and international at all campuses and all sites.

Students can access advice, guidance and support in the following areas:

- Finding out if you have a specific learning difficulty like dyslexia
- Applying for funding through the Disabled Students' Allowance (DSA)
- Arranging DSA assessments of need
- Special arrangements in examinations
- Accessing loaned equipment (e.g. digital recorders)
- Specialist one-to-one study skills tuition
- Ensuring access to course materials in alternative formats (e.g. Braille)
- Providing educational support workers (e.g. note-takers, readers, library assistants)
- Access to specialist mentoring support for students with mental health issues and Autistic Spectrum Disorders.

Links with employers, placement opportunities and transferable skills

Our provision at Queen Mary is enhanced by our proximity to major cultural centres such as the British Film Institute, which includes the BFI Southbank, National Library and National Archive, the Institute of Contemporary Arts, the Cine- Lumiere at the French Institute, the Whitechapel Gallery and the film archives at the Imperial War Museum. Our London location adds a large amount of value to the programme as we have links with the London Film Festival, BFI, local film festivals, UK Asian Film Festival and East London Film Festival.

Our teaching staff have national and international reputations in their fields. You will be taught by experienced filmmakers, as well as by leading academics in areas which cover many different periods of film history and which draw on films and cinema traditions from around the world. The learning outcomes and transferable skills gained from the MA in Film Studies will serve as a valuable springboard to an array of career options.

The programme engages with current platforms – BFI Film Festival; DOCHOUSE; RECLAIMING THE FRAME at Genesis. Relevant platforms are researched each year so as the programme stays current. 100 pounds has been made available for each student. These funds support the extra curriculum work of the programme that places students at the heart of current industry debate.
