

Queen Mary
University of London

Rethinking Childhood Studies Today online seminar series:

Putting ‘Children First’? Tentative Explorations of Alternative Imaginaries

Panel: Professor Rachel Rosen,
Dr Hedi Viterbo, Dr Rachel Humphris

Thursday 24 June, 4-5:30pm

Online (Zoom), Queen Mary University of London

In this panel discussion Prof Rachel Rosen (Education, University College London), Dr Hedi Viterbo (Law, Queen Mary) and Dr Rachel Humphris (Politics and International Relations, Queen Mary) will critically reflect on policies that ‘put children first’. The discussion will focus on issues in child migration and youth justice policies, while considering possible implications for other child-related areas.

Co-sponsored by the Queen Mary Institute for Humanities and Social Sciences and the Queen Mary Centre for Childhood Cultures, the research seminar series Rethinking Childhood Studies Today is dedicated to the subject of ‘Childhood Studies’, broadly conceived. This series will bring into focus issues relating to children and childhood, ranging across geography, anthropology, sociology, education, politics, law, children’s literature and modern languages. These issues will be contextualised within, and examined in light of, wider societal, methodological, and theoretical challenges.

This seminar is FREE but please book your place by visiting eventbrite.co.uk/e/panel-discussion-putting-children-first